

Abstract

A method for remotely compiling, converting, storing and displaying data is disclosed. The illustrated embodiment of the present invention converts data in 5 documents submitted over a network into XML documents. The XML documents are stored in a central location where designated users may convert them into different viewable formats using a multitude of stylesheets, such as XSL stylesheets, thereby allowing display of the same data from a number of different viewpoints.